

Rajko Grlić is an award winning Croatian movie director, one of the most famous directors in former Yugoslavia and Europe, and an eminent scholar at the Ohio University School of Film.

His movies were shown in cinemas and movie festivals on five continents and won numerous international awards, including the Cannes Film Festival.

The movie is promoted as “a love story about hate,” and explores the topic we all talk about these days, showing that despite our different ethnic and religious backgrounds and sexual preferences, in the end, we are all human beings. The main characters’ stories and the movie will make you laugh and maybe cry, but will shake your emotions and make you think.
